- It helped to maintain our campus clean and healthy.
- It created awareness among staff members and visitors not to throw wastes all around and that burning of plastic is hazardous to health
- It helped to keep the labs and rooms very clean and provided knowledge to students and researchers on proper disposal of waste, plastic and other hazardous chemicals.
- It helped to say 'No to plastic carry bags' among the staff members
- The public awareness programmes helped people to follow effective waste disposal methods
- It helped to impart knowledge among residential associations on various compost production methods from wastes
- It helped in keeping surroundings of their house green and beautiful by planting medicinal plants and spices
- The awareness program helped school students to understand the importance of cleanliness in their life to protect from various contagious diseases
- The training programme conducted in connection with swachhata helped to make health food items and created awareness on the bad effects of junk foods
- The training programs also helped women self group to make healthy food items from locally available fruits which helped to generate income for their livelihood
- The knowledge on making compost organically helped women self help group to make their own composting units for generating income and for using it in their field
- The biogas unit established at ICAR-IISR campus helped to effectively manage wastes from staff canteen and produce biogas for cooking
- The 'Nakshatravanam' established in connection with swachhata activities at ICAR-IISR is becoming a resting place for students and visitors.
